ART CHANGES LIVES

Our 2021 story

At Creativity Explored, 2021 was a year of daily problem solving.

Our team tackled the little problems: how to get internet access for an artist to participate in virtual programs, or how to improve our website to get CE art to our fans when the gallery was closed. And we stayed focused on the big problem: how to keep our community of disabled artists – each one of them with different needs – connected to their beloved Creativity Explored community.

To support artists' health, artmaking and well-being, we had to make remote services a forum for real connection. We had to make virtual classes and programs genuine and vibrant.

We had to look at the unique situation of each artist and support them to live their best life under very difficult circumstances.

I'm proud to say that the passionate artists, staff, and board of Creativity Explored pulled it off – and learned lessons that will shape our future. During the most uncertain days of the global pandemic, during too many Zoom calls to count, the Creativity Explored community pulled together. We offered hundreds of virtual classes from animal visits to quiet drawing, delivered countless bags of art supplies, made endless check-in calls, exchanged hundreds of pieces of mail art, and steadily planned for a future where we could gather in person once more.

The legacy of fiscal year 2021 is one I'm also proud of: our team knows more than ever before about using technology to learn, make art, and stay in touch.

We understand the full lives and potential of our artists better than we did before the pandemic.

And today, we're reaping the benefits. That means plans for online programming to join our menu of permanent services long after the public health crisis is over, and focusing on our artists as whole people, striving to live their best lives.

Many thanks to our whole community – and that means you, too – who helped Creativity Explored keep going – and even thrive – through a tough year. Every meeting, every plan, every donation, every art purchase, every class and every partnership made this a year of surprises and successes.

Thank you,

Linda Johnson

Our goals

In 2021, we launched an ambitious strategic plan to focus our priorities over the next five years. Even during the pandemic, we made headway with artist-informed planning and establishing CE as a community cornerstone.

OUR GOALS TO GUIDE US:

Artists shape programs

Artists are integrated into all areas of the organization – from the board to the staff – and make choices that shape programming.

Lead with our legacy

Following the legacy of our founders, CE continues to forge the path for developmentally disabled artists to influence society and the art world through their creativity.

Anchor and grow our community

Our facilities reflect our place as an enduring community cornerstone that has an equitable, diverse, and supportive culture – allowing our creative community to reach their fullest potential.

OUR VALUES WHICH GROUND US:

- Artists have choices
- Anyone can safely be themselves
- Inclusivity is prioritized
- Decisions are artist-centered
- Creativity is at our core

Our online gallery shows

JUNE 25, 2020 - SEPTEMBER 3, 2020

The Park “a darling walk for the mind”

This show took us down the rabbit hole, exploring a rich selection of artworks from over 20 past and present CE artists curated by CE teaching artist Ajit Chauhan. The show featured a guest appearance by Bay Area painter Alicia McCarthy and was dedicated to CE artist José Campos, who passed away in May 2020.

SEPTEMBER 11, 2020 - NOVEMBER 3, 2020

The Good American

The exhibit featured over two dozen artists with developmental disabilities, and their visions of the USA with community advocacy and a series of activations during the election year. Curated by Creativity Explored Curator & Exhibitions Coordinator Cléa Massiani.

JANUARY 14, 2021 - MARCH 26, 2021

Hidden Figures: Ana Maria Vidalon

This was the first solo exhibition for longtime Creativity Explored artist Ana Maria Vidalon curated by CE’s Director of Art Partnerships Ann Kappes. Vidalon’s work consists of an unending series of marks, curls, and swivels that amass into wavering forms, often overpowering small figurative elements.

APRIL 28, 2021 - JUNE 12, 2021

Cake Taxi

IT’S NOT A PARTY WITHOUT A CAKE! Camille Holvoet—a Creativity Explored artist since 2001—continues to craft dizzying beautiful cakes on paper from her home in San Francisco. Guest Curators: Jordan Stein and Lindsey White

JUNE 19, 2021 - AUGUST 19, 2021

Blackiful

This group exhibition responded to an ongoing need for Black sanctuary space. Featuring artwork by self-identified Black artists, and co-curated by CE artists Alissa Bledsoe, Gerald Wiggins, Joseph Omolayole, Vincent Jackson, and Joseph “JD” Green, and guest curator Danielle Wright.

This past year, we emerged from a season of pivoting services and carving new paths for the Creativity Explored community.

Our artists are not only artists, and Creativity Explored is not only an art studio. We are a program that honors the lived experiences of Creativity Explored artists and implements whole-person services through an artist-centered lens. The launch of the Social Services Department in 2021 allows us to gather resources and implement projects that center our artists' voices.

As Creativity Explored's first Social Services Manager, I'm tasked with ensuring our artists' input reaches each area of the organization. I'm building a team to expand our dedicated staff who respond to artists' needs and support artists' goals.

Whether they're in the studio or tuning in from home, it is vital that CE artists choose how they engage with our services. This includes: formalizing methods to collect artist feedback, offering individualized support, and expanding artist-led initiatives. I'm very excited to explore these new avenues and to see where our artists lead us next.

ARTIST SPOTLIGHT

Ada Chow, CE artist since 2018

While many CE artists have gone the route of virtual artmaking and digital communications with their teaching artists, Ada Chow quickly developed a collaborative mail art practice with Teaching Artists Michael Napper, Patricia Rubio, and the entire Mail Art Club. She fills handmade notebooks with illustrations and responds to drawing prompts received in letters, sending her creations back through the mail and reinvigorating an old-school method of artistic exchange.

With generous attention to color and space, Ada exalts common objects and daily rituals by infusing them with special significance and presence. Illustrations of a laundry room, a vacuum cleaner, jeans, or steeping tea – details that have become anchors of a life spent mostly at home – become full and fresh with life. Her portraits of CE teaching artists, some masked and some nostalgically bare, are an ode to her relationships and collaborations central to Creativity Explored’s spirit.

ARTIST SPOTLIGHT

Joseph "JD" Green, CE artist since 2012

Since joining Creativity Explored in 2012, Joseph “JD” Green has explored many roles: artist, curator, intern, activist, and even performer. During the studio closure, JD stayed engaged as a leader in the CE community. He curated playlists for our community’s online Dance Party and facilitated an Imagine @ Home class leading the public through blind contour drawing exercises.

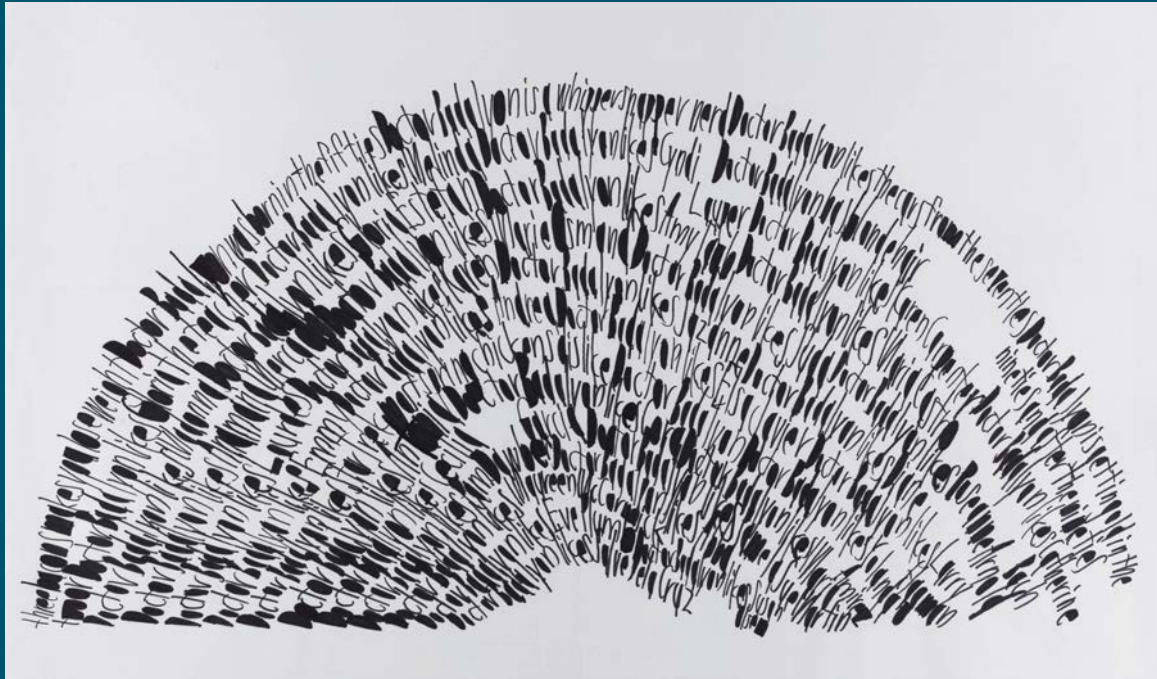

In 2020, JD joined five other self-identified Black CE artists to create Blackiful, a group that has been and continues to be a way for Black artists at CE to study, discuss, and support one another during the pandemic and in light of the ongoing Movement for Black Lives and racial justice. In 2021, the all-Black artist cohort co-curated a group exhibition at CE’s gallery space featuring 23 Black CE artists’ work.

When I first walked through the doors at Creativity Explored, I thought “I never want to leave this place!”

I joined the Board in 2017 after being introduced by two former board members. I am forever grateful to them! When I first walked through the doors at Creativity Explored, I thought “I never want to leave this place!” I want to become a “fly on the wall” and watch the artists work all day – some quietly, some engaged with each other or their talented teachers; the hum of artists at work.

Immediately captivated by the array of artwork created – paintings, ceramics, fiberwork, drawings, collage, and more – I am deeply committed to the continued success of this vital organization as a place for disabled artists to create, find their voice, and earn an income.

As the Covid pandemic impacted CE, the staff responded immediately: calling artists on the phone, delivering supplies, and quickly establishing many Zoom classes. Out of this evolved the Mail Art Club which I joined and have since shared in the exchange of hundreds of pieces of mail created by the group. We are now planning a mail art themed exhibition in the CE gallery. Everyone will want to see this!

Habitat: Live Artfully

Our desire to continue our annual collaboration at the Herman Miller showroom inspired us to be at home with the changing world around us. Featuring original CE artwork and one-of-a-kind decor items, the guest-curated Habitat collections offered three key elements that make a home a habitat – color, texture, form. The project culminated in virtual events and field trips with CE artists where architects and designers shared how they incorporate CE artwork into business and home designs.

Come to Your Census

Led by Art + Action, COME TO YOUR CENSUS was a creative call to action that spoke to and motivated all San Franciscans to participate in the 2020 Census in order to receive their fair share of resources and political representation. Creativity Explored artists Antonio Benjamin and Andrew Li were both selected for the campaign's materials, and their works were found on public media channels as well as on banners at the San Francisco Library. As part of the campaign, Creativity Explored staff and volunteers came together to offer online workshops teaching CE artists how to complete their census forms and how to register to vote.
